OUR RED PETS.

Report of the Secretary of the Interior Relating to the Indian Policy.

[SPECIAL TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Washington, Dec 1.—In his annual report the secretary of the interior gives a review not only of the operations of the past year but of the four years of his administration. The larger part is devoted to Indian affairs. In his opening chapter upon this subject the secretary gives an explanation of an important change which has taken place with regard to the reservation system. He says that although at first accepting, as he found it, the reservation policy which had so long been followed by the Indian office, more extensive observation and study of the matter gradually convinced him that this was a mistaken policy, and that it would be better for the Indians and more in accordance with justice as well as wise expediency to respect their home attachments, to leave them upon the lands they occupied, provided such lands were capable of yielding a sustenance by agricultural or pastoral pursuits, and begin and follow up the practice of introducing among them habits and occupations of civilized life on the ground they inhabited. In view of the fact also that the maintenance of a system of large reservations against the pressure of white immigration and settlement would in the course of time become impracticable, a different policy has been followed, having for its object settlement of the Indians upon lands in severalty, disposal for their benefit of their lands not required for this purpose, and gradually to prepare the way for their final incorporation into the body politic as independent and self-relying men invested with all the rights which other inhabitants of the country possess. The results already accomplished in pursuance of this policy and promising outlook in some other directions are described in general terms and illustrated by specific acts of progress made by individual tribes.

The secretary does not make any recommendation of importance in regard to land grant railroads, but recapitulates their last annual reports, and states as the result of investigation made by the government auditor, that their property is in good condition. Their earnings have largely increased, and although rates both for freight and passengers have been reduced, it is believed that there will be with the filling up of the country west of the Missouri remunerative business enough for each of them.

THE NORTHERN PACIFIC.

More about the New Syndicate—The Road to be Pushed on All Divisions.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

New York, Dec 1.—A Philadelphia special furnishes additional facts concerning the Northern Pacific syndicate. From the engineer's estimate it is thought that $40,000,000 will prove more than enough to complete all the lines. The syndicate take this amount in first mortgage 6 per cent. bonds, which are to be issued at the rate of $25,000 a mile. As the entire line will be over 2000 miles in length, it will be noticed that the issue will be exhausted before this limit is reached, but of the total issue an amount equal to the bonds on the Pend d'Oreille division, which is bonded at the rate of $25,000 a mile, and the bonds of the Missouri division, which is bonded at half that amount, will be reserved to retire those bonds at maturity. The syndicate agree to take $10,000,000 of the issue during the coming year, and this is thought to be all that can be expended with advantage by the company. The Northern Pacific [illegible] to build the road itself, dealing directly with the contractors who do the work and without the intervening of a construction company. As the company has now completed road enough upon which to issue the entire amount of the bonds that are to be sold during the first year, work on three divisions of the line will begin simultaneously. The advance guard is now grubbing the line on the Montana division. The surveyors are locating the line on the Yellowstone division of 420 miles, and work will soon begin on the Cascade division on the Pacific coast. The expectation now is that the company will be able to complete a mile a day at least, during the coming year.

THE WHIPPING POST

Recommended by Henry Bergh in Forcible Terms.

[SPECIAL TO THE OREGONIAN.]

New York, Dec 1.—At a meeting in Cooper Institute last night of friends of prison reform Henry Bergh astonished the assemblage by declaring himself utterly opposed to the sentiment of the meeting. He said: "I believe that if a man cannot live without murdering somebody, he must be got out of the way. I say kill him. A great deal has been said about improving criminals. Let me tell you how I would abolish all penitentiaries in the land and save all expense of running. In their place I would have whipping posts everywhere and to make sure that the lash was laid fairly on I would offer a reward for the invention of a steam machine that could not be bribed with offers of political place or money. No man has had a better opportunity to see what criminals are made of than I have had and I tell you that hundreds of them commit crime to be sent to places which you provide for their comfort. They are warm and clean there. They get good soup and potatoes and everything which hard working honest men and women can not get in your tenement houses."

MEXICAN AFFAIRS

[SPECIAL TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Havana, Dec 1.—City of Mexico advices of the 23d: The appointment of Gen Nevins as secretary of war is all that is known of the formation of the new cabinet. Gomez Placio, ex-minister to Washington, was instructed to take the ministry of foreign relations, but it is not known whether he has accepted.

Capt. Eads has arrived and intends asking for a subsidy to build his contemplated ship canal across the isthmus of Tehuantepec. The government is less interested in canals than in railroads, nor do the people seem to realize the direct advantage of the proposed canal, and subsidies are out of the question.

French residents are making elaborate preparations to receive their minister. The government is also giving unusual attention to the occasion.

SOUTH AMERICA.

The South American War.

Rome, Dec 1.—The Diritto publishes the following telegram from Valparaiso: 25,000 Chilians, 5000 cavalry and 100 cannon left Arica on the 5th ult., and arrived at Pisco on the 25th. A great battle was expected near the end of November. The Peruvians, it is estimated, number nearly twice as many as the Chilians.

The Peruvian Guano company in London had a telegram Nov 29th that the Chilians occupied Pisco Nov 25th, without opposition.

ENGLISH AS A SCAPEGOAT.

A REPUBLICAN PAPER IN HIS DEFENSE—HE IS NO WORSE THAN HIS PARTY.

[From the Indianapolis Journal.]

The democrats have no right to make a scapegoat of Mr English. He is not responsible for the defeat of the party either in this state or in the country at large. He is a far better and abler man than most of his party colleagues who are abusing him to-day. The Journal has not spared Mr English during the campaign, although it has not joined in a senseless hue and cry against him. Now that the campaign is over and he is defeated as he deserved to be on account of his political record and party associations, we tell his detractors in his own party that he is as good as any and better than most of them. Having nominated him deliberately at Cincinnati, they disgrace themselves by trying to make him responsible for the defeat of the party. He is not responsible. He is as strong as his party. The democratic party is responsible for his defeat, not he for the defeat of the party. The democracy would have done no better in this state if Hendricks, McDonald or Voorhees had been nominated for vice president. They would have done no better in the country at large if any other man than Mr English had been nominated. He had to carry in this state the odium of the supreme court decision, a load which no democrat living could have carried to victory. He had to carry Henry Watterson's tariff for revenue only. He had to carry the general unpopularity of his party and the stupid asinine repeated blunders of Seven-mule Barnum. Did the democracy do any better in New York where Hancock lives than they did in Indiana? Did they do any better in Connecticut where another English, a very popular and wealthy man, ran for governor? He deserves defeat, but he does not deserve the abuse of his party. So far as known he did not lend himself to any dishonorable schemes during the campaign. We are not aware that he indorsed the Chinese letter forgery or that he approved any of the attacks made on Gen Garfield's personal character. This is more than can be said for most of the democratic leaders. Especially it is more than can be said for Hendricks or McDonald, compared with either of whom Mr English stands before the country to-day as a model gentleman and statesman.

Light at Last.

Senator Brown's speech before the legislature of Georgia on the night of his election to a full term of the office he now holds by appointment was full of notable points, but this paragraph was specially suggestive, viz:

"I have the educational question very much at heart. Disguise it as you may, the New England States with their schools and universities have dictated laws to this continent. They have sent New England ideas all over the west and the whole northwest [illegible] at first as [illegible] little empire [illegible] which Napoleon [illegible] almost obliterate. Hardly a generation passed before it had in turn humbled France and taken the power from its empire. The bright-eyed boys in your mountains and wire grass may represent you nobly before the world if you educate them. We must also educate the colored race, and they ought to be educated for the benefit of the union and by the friends of the union. [Applause.] I would devote the proceeds of the public lands to this purpose on a basis of illiteracy. The colored people are citizens and we must do them justice."

Over-big Horses a Mistake.

The London Live Stock Journal observes that over big horses for any purpose are a mistake, so [illegible] corporation of London has found out. When they started to do their own scavengering, instead of contracting for it, they [illegible] all the giants they could get [illegible] hands was preferred. The mistake has been found out; sixteen hands is now the favored height. These horses are less subject to roaring and altogether more healthy.

Leland Stanford, president of the Central Pacific, and Fred Crocker, vice president of the [illegible] Pacific, and various heads of departments of both railroads, were before the railroad commission this morning, in relation to a proposed schedule to fix the [illegible] freights of all railroads in the state. Gov. Stanford, on behalf of the Central and Southern Pacific roads, objected to the commission fixing any tariff for freights for either of the roads, [illegible] that both roads were operating under a charter from the federal government, and that the law directing this commission to regulate fares and freights only applied to railroads operated under charter from the state. Governor Stanford furthermore intimated that if the commission undertook to regulate the schedule of freights for either of the companies which he represented that he would seek an injunction from the circuit court. The commission took no action in the premises.

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY'S DOWNFALL.

The Curse of Slavery and of the Secession Rebellion Pursuing it to its Grave.

[From the Chicago Times, Ind.]

The recent presidential election has shown that there is an invincible reason why the democratic party can never win a national victory. It is that the youth of this republic is not democratic. The sons of democratic fathers have grown up republicans. So long as slavery and the war linger within the memory of Americans, the youth of the republic will continue to grow up republicans and slavery and the war will be remembered as long as the public school system exists. The public schools have slain the democratic party with the text book.

It is vain for statesmen to declare that there were as many democrats as republicans in the union army. It is vain to affirm that the war for the preservation of the union could not have been carried to a successful close without the assistance of the democratic party. It is idle for philanthropy to suggest that the attitude of that party toward the war in the beginning was a humane one; that it was inspired by the higher and better wish that the cause of the conflict should be peaceably removed and the spilling of brothers' blood by brothers' hands avoided. The democratic party has been ideally identified with slavery and slave holding. The republican party is ideally identified with emancipation and the war. Therefore the democratic party can never win a national victory. Its old men are dying away. The boys who catch the ballots that fall from their stiffened hands are republicans.

This fact cannot be denied. It will do no good to quarrel with it. All other causes which have operated to diminish the number of democrats and increase the number of republicans are insignificant beside this one tremendous and invincible fact. The curse of slavery has poisoned the blood and rotted the bone of the democratic party. The malediction of the war has palsied its brain.

The young wife who held the babe up to kiss the father as he hurried to the tap of his departing regiment has not suckled a democrat. The weary foot of the gray grandmother who watched the children while the wife was busy has not rocked the cradle of democrats. The chair that the soldier father never came back to fill has not been climbed upon by democrats. The old blue coat that his comrades carried back was cut up for little jackets, but not one inclosed the heart of a democrat. The rattled musket that fell from him with his last shot became the thoughtless toy of his boys, but not a hand that played with it was the hand of a democrat. The babe he kissed crowed and crowed for his return, and its unwitting and unanswered notes were not from the throat of a democrat. The tear soiled camp letters which the mother read aloud in the long, bitter evening, while the boys clustered at her knees, did not fall upon democratic ears. The girls' sobs, blending with the mother's weeping, did not make democrats of their brothers. Perhaps the father had been a democrat all his life!

The children go to school. There is not a democrat on its benches. The first reader contains the portrait of Abraham Lincoln; that kind and sturdy face never made a democrat. On its simple pages in words of one or two syllables, is told the story of his birth and death. That story never made a democrat. In the pranks of the play ground that name silences the frolicsome and makes the jolliest grave. That name never made a democrat. In the pictures that light up the geography are the firing on Fort Sumter and the death of Ellsworth. These pictures make no democrats. The first page of the history contains a representation of the surrender of Lee at Appomattox. No boy gazes on that and ever after avows himself a democrat.

In the higher grades the same subtle and unresisted influence is at work. The text books contain extracts from patriots' speeches during the war. These speeches make no democrats. The great battles are briefly described; the narrative has no democratic listeners. The strain of martial music rings through the readers, and that music makes no democrats. Sketches of the great generals are given; their brave deeds arouse the enthusiasm of the lads, but there is no democrat among them. The horrors and sufferings of the slaves are told; the maddened blood that mounts the boys' cheeks is not democratic in blood. The curse of slavery has pursued the democratic party, and has hounded it to its death. Therefore, let it die, and no lip will be found to say a prayer over the grass on its grave.

The late defeat need not be attributed to any other cause. Other causes were at work, but they are only incidental. The tariff was one. Sectionalism was a second. Let well enough alone was a third. The October failure in Indiana was a fourth. But all these were trivial and altogether could not have accomplished the result. The result was accomplished because the youth of the country is not democratic. That party is therefore without a future and without a hope. The malediction of the war has palsied its brain. The curse of slavery has poisoned its blood and rotted its bone. Let it [illegible]

Redistricting the States.

[From the New York Herald, Nov 19.]

It is the state legislatures which, after the apportionment is made thereupon, proceed to redistrict the states. Congress does not do this. Now [illegible] the so-called uncertain states the republicans [illegible] this fall carried the legislature, and if the next session of congress declares the reapportionment these republican legislatures will redistrict [illegible] states and everybody knows that they will do this to their own advantage. Throw it over to an extra session and the legislatures to be chosen next fall [illegible] do the redistricting, and some at least of these may then be democratic. New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Ohio and Connecticut have now eight democratic senators, but in the senate after the [illegible] of March they will have ten republican senators and only two democrats. This shows that these states sometime in the past have had democratic legislatures and may again in the future; but that just now all these legislatures are republican. It would seem that the republicans would want to take advantage of what they have got now and not wait [illegible] the chance of another election, [illegible] when these states [illegible] 104 members, more than a third of the probable number of the house under the new apportionment.

Supplying Time as they do Gas.

Time is now supplied [illegible] public buildings, hotels and private residences in Paris, like gas or water, from a central station by means of compressed air forced through [illegible] pipes. At the central station there is a reservoir of compressed air, and for the first twenty seconds of every minute [illegible] current of the compressed air is allowed [illegible] the apparatus [illegible] of a small bellows, which [illegible] the transmitted air, the works of the clock [illegible] at a practical uniform rate. [illegible] wrought iron about [illegible] diameter and these are connected [illegible] of lead one fifth of an inch in diameter, while the different stories of a building are supplied by rubber tubes one eighth of an inch in diameter. Any number of clocks can be actuated in this way within a radius of two miles of the central station.

BE YE LIKE FOOLISH.

For ten years my wife was confined to her bed with such a complication of ailments that no doctor could tell what was the matter or cure her, and I used up a small fortune in humbug stuff. Six months ago I saw a U. S. flag with Hop Bitters on it, and I thought I would be a fool once more. I tried it, but my folly proved to be wisdom. Two bottles cured her; she is now as well and strong as any man's wife, and it cost me only two dollars. Be ye likewise foolish.—H. W., Detroit, Mich.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

FOUR CENTURIES OF ENGLISH LETTERS. Edited by W. Baptiste Scoones. New York: Harper & Brothers. For sale by [illegible] San Francisco.

A well edited collection of the correspondence of [illegible] Four Centuries of English Life [illegible] welcome addition to the books in libraries [illegible] own. The research necessary for compiling [illegible] of such a volume involves labor that [illegible] persons of ordinary strength and opportunities can [illegible] employ. [illegible] large library will find in the book before us letters which [illegible] These letters, covering the space of four centuries, illustrate many changing phases of politics and society in the mother land, and the frequent explanatory notes of Mr Scoones give the necessary information concerning them, without which [illegible] knowledge would remain imperfect. The series begins in 1450 with the quaint Paston letters, carrying us back to the Wars of the Roses. It is finished in 1859 with two genial epistles from the late prince consort to his daughter, the crown princess of Russia. In these hurried days when the brief convenience of the postal card threatens to annihilate the charming accomplishment of letter writing once cultivated by all people of good position, a book of this character suggests many reflections. With our multiplied facilities of travel and our varied objects of entertainment are we content to sacrifice the pleasure we might derive from the graceful and hearty exchange of letters simply because we are both busy and indolent? Of course Mr Scoones' work is a contribution to that style of literature which is personal and biographical. The title page is almost a directory of noted people, with the dates of their births and deaths set opposite their names. Here is a beautiful letter from Sir Thomas More to his wife, condoling with her on the loss by fire of their house at Chelsea, which disaster had occurred in his absence. Love letters from Henry the Great to poor Anne Boleyn, stately missives from the haughty Elizabeth which yet are touched with womanly gentleness, letters from Hampden, Cromwell, Charles I, Joseph Addison, Jeremy Taylor, John Milton, Sir Isaac Newton, Nell Gwynne, Daniel DeFoe, Dean Swift and others, lead us gradually down to times which are comparatively near our own. Everybody knows that John Wesley was a man of affairs and a natural autocrat, and would that some modern preachers might take to heart his imperious edict to a minister given to violent pulpit manners: "Scream no more, at the peril of your soul. God warns you by me, whom He has set over you. Speak as earnestly as you can, but do not scream." Boswell's Life of Johnson is in every library, but there may be those who have never seen the passionate heart of the uncouth lion of London literary circles as they will see it here in the selections from his correspondence. Cowper's Memoirs have always been prized by those who have had leisure to read them, yet there are many persons who habitually think of him only as a half insane poet, morbidly sensitive and needlessly bigoted on the subject of religion. His playful and rhyming letter to Mrs. Newton, his tender and confidential disclosures to other friends, with their singular mingling of mysticness and timid reserve, throw a different light upon his nature. We can not enumerate the list further, but must say that no more pleasant book has recently issued from the press.

Books of the Present Day.

[From the New York Times.]

The literature of England is the literature of America. While both nations speak the same tongue this must continue to be so. Whatever is produced of literary value on either side of the water becomes the common property of both countries. This makes our author's survey of the literature of the period which his volumes cover of as much interest to the American as to the English reader. Some of his opinions are peculiar, but in general a sound basis is offered for their formation. The Darwinian theory he maintains may be accepted by the most orthodox believer without the firmness of his faith molting a feather. The theory is one altogether as to the process of growth and construction in the universe, and, whether accurate or inaccurate, does not seem in anywise to touch the question which is concerned with the sources of all life, movement and being. The two other great teachers in the same school—Profs Huxley and Tyndall—he regards as accomplished scientists, combining with an unusual genius for investigation "the gifts of literary expression." Mr. Tyndall has, in his opinion, not only done more scientific work than Mr Huxley, but has written more and that more eloquently, though at the same time his views in regard to man and nature have been marred by a certain coarse materialism. McCarthy's handling of his fellow historians is delicate and appreciative in the extreme. As regards their different methods, he distinguishes Froude and Kinglake as belonging to the romantic school of historians, Buckle and Lecky to the philosophic, and Freeman, Canon Stubbs and Green to the practical and real. Amongst the poets he gives the first place to Swinburne, and names after him Morris and Rossetti. In dealing with the novelists he says: "The fiction of this second period has one really great name and one only." It is scarcely necessary to say that the name referred to is that of George Eliot.

As a contribution to historical literature, Justin McCarthy's work has a plan distinctly its own. No other writer has ever attempted to deal with the events of his own time in so comprehensive and exhaustive a manner. Rarely indeed has any historian given such an amount of space to the consideration of so short a period. The four volumes together cover the events of little more than forty years. These are described not with prolixity, but with a careful attention to detail that has the effect of showing each side fairly. Much perhaps of the superior excellence of the work may be accounted for by the education and training of the author, which have been such as to peculiarly fit him for the task he has so admirably performed. As a member of Parliament he has had an opportunity to familiarize himself with the secrets of statecraft. His experience as a novelist, as already suggested, has stood him in good stead, enabling him to portray character with ease and effect and to describe events in a lively and entertaining manner. Altogether his work cannot fail to become popular with a very large class. It will be valued not only as an accurate record of the course of English history for the past half century, but also as one of the most readable books that have recently been offered to the public.

Distrust of the Late Enemies of the Government.

[From the New York Evening Post.]

A struggle of dynasties or of religious faiths bears only a qualified analogy to a contest such as that through which we have lately passed, and there are especial points of dissimilarity between an American democrat of this age and an English Jacobite of the last century. Yet in both cases, in the case of the struggle between north and south, and that between the houses of Stuart and Brunswick, there are also resemblances that warrant the citation of historical precedents. Perhaps the [illegible] men who fought for Charles Edward at Culloden might a generation later have been safely trusted with power in the service of the successful dynasty. But the English people did not think so. [illegible] English people did not trust them. The English people thought that to give them control of their government was to risk fresh attempts for the [illegible] of principles and interests that had been tested, rejected and put down [illegible] the [illegible] of the nation. With [illegible] among the people we may justly say that this country [illegible] the same drift. [illegible] of our contemporaries is not at fault when [illegible] the cure of the [illegible] point out no [illegible] of evading it.

THE BOYCOTT EXPERIMENT

[From the Chicago Tribune.]

The organization of 600,000 farmers of Ireland in a compact, quiet, peaceful and non-interference association to resist the rapacity of British agents and landlords is meeting with remarkable success. [illegible] experiment that has worked like a charm, and has answered more than it [illegible] England and [illegible] more than could a general uprising of the Irish people with arms in their hands or [illegible] masses of all the [illegible] in Ireland. An uprising of this kind could be easily put down by force of arms. It would afford the government just the pretext it wants for the use of force. But this is not an uprising, but a [illegible] sitting. There is nothing to attack. There is no [illegible] in the field, no violence in any quarter. The Boycotted farms are white with the harvest, but there are no laborers. The crops are rotting in the ground, and those who have hitherto harvested them sit quietly by with folded hands. There is no way to compel them to work if they are not disposed, and Boycotting is proving an expensive method of securing crops. Mr Parnell in his dispatch to Boston, which was printed in the last issue of the Tribune, says that it will need 7000 troops fourteen days in securing the crops on Boycott's farm and protecting their communications from the farm to their rear. He estimates that this little harvesting frolic alone will cost the taxpayers of England $15,000 per day, and for the entire time the good round sum of $225,000, which will make the potatoes and turnips rescued for Mr Boycott and his principal, Lord Erne, by the British government cost about 25 cents per pound. The experience of Boycott in running a farm and of Britannia in helping him harvest his crops suggests some significant mathematical calculations. There are thirteen other Boycotted landlord agents in the county of Mayo near Lough Mask whose crops must be gathered in the same expensive and troublesome manner. Taking the cost of the Boycott farm as a fair average sample of the cost of the new system of harvesting on these thirteen farms, the English exchequer will suffer to the tune of $2,925,000. The Irish people themselves are so pleased with the new style of harvesting that they are adopting it all over. Mr Parnell calculates that it will be adopted by the people toward 2000 Irish landlords and their agents before Christmas, and that it will necessitate the employment of 1,000,000 troops to save the crops of these landlords. The mathematical features of this plan are very interesting. If 7000 troops used as harvesters involve an expense of $225,000, one man will cost $32.14. Ergo, if one man costs $32.14, 1,000,000 men must cost $32,140,000. What the late Mr. Greeley knew about farming was scientific and thorough as compared with what Boycott and his friends know about farming with the assistance of the English government. At last the Irish question has struck the English people where they cannot fail to appreciate and understand it. No problem was ever misunderstood by an Englishman which affected his pocket even in the most remote degree.

RAILROAD PROGRESS.

The Dalles Times contains the following news concerning the progress of the O. R. & N. Co's road beyond Celilo:

The track is laid in good condition from Celilo to Blalock's, a distance of about forty miles, all of it being surfaced and in good running order. Passengers go through to Blalock's from The Dalles and at the latter place go on board the boat over night. At 5 o'clock A. M. the boat leaves the landing for Umatilla, arriving there about 11, where the passengers take rail again for Walla Walla. The track is laid to Coyote station, a distance of seventeen miles this way from Umatilla, but it is not surfaced and therefore not in running condition.

The trains from Walla Walla will use Umatilla as a stopping station until the road is laid through from Blalock's, when the narrow gauge of the upper road will be changed to standard. At present there are about one hundred and sixty men employed grading beyond Blalock's, but work has been stopped at Coyote station. The boats engaged now are the Harvest Queen and D S Baker, which make regular trips between the railroad termini.

The Northwest is lying at Blalock's and is used for eating purposes and sleeping quarters by the employes of the company, who number at present 13—the agent, freight clerk, telegraph operator, foreman and a gang of nine men. The hull of the Tenino has been moved up there from Celilo and is being used as a wharf boat. There is a Y track used at this place which is used instead of a turn table, and the company are busily engaged building a double incline from what is termed the yard or station to the river.

It is thought that the road will be completed by the 15th of January, when cars will leave The Dalles and go through to Walla Walla on the O. R. & N. Co's road or to the terminus of N. P. R. R. beyond Ainsworth, using the large ferry boat to be constructed at Celilo for crossing the Columbia at the mouth of Snake river. The N. P. R. R. have their road constructed from a point opposite Ainsworth to Wallula. The time is not far distant when a net work of railroads will intersect eastern Oregon and eastern Washington, and The Dalles and Walla Walla railroad of the O. R. & N. Co will be the first on the list.

RELIGIOUS NOTES

[Advocate.]

The basement of the Taylor street M. E. church is greatly beautified, made light and cheerful, at a cost of $145.

The collection at the union Thanksgiving services at the Presbyterian church was about $60, in aid of the Orphans and Ladies' Relief Society.

Rev C. V. Anthony, so well known to many of our readers as a former pastor of Taylor street church, has well performed his duty as the representative of the 11th district in the general missionary and church extension committees. We felt it a special fortune for this northwest when he was appointed, as he knows us and our wants better than any man we might have expected would be selected outside of our own conferences. We say to him, from our own knowledge of the difficult and delicate duties of his place, well done.

Portland has a much greater variety of religious organizations than it had a few years ago. We have now the Christian church, two Methodist churches, Congregational, Advent, Presbyterian, German Evangelical, Scandinavian Evangelical, Baptist, German Methodist, Unitarian, Seaman's Bethel, Young Men's Christian Association, two Protestant Episcopal churches, African M. E. church, German Reformed. In addition to the above, where services are regularly held, the Congregationalists, Methodists, and Episcopalians have mission chapels where occasional services are held. The Roman Catholics have two societies, one at the cathedral, the other at the Sisters' academy.

The Chicago Tribune is responsible for the following: A subscriber desires to be informed through our valuable paper, "if it is considered proper for an engaged young lady to dance frequently with gentlemen at entertainments which her affianced does not attend." It depends upon where you live. In Boston or New York it might do; but in Carson City or Leadville an engaged young girl never dances with any gentleman except her affianced. Very few men are willing to die for the sake of one evening's enjoyment.

Was it not a wise journalist who said, "Now is the time for husbands to get the paper early and cut out the advertisements of places where sealskin sacques are sold. A cut in time often saves $175."

OUR EXPORTS.

It is certainly gratifying to all true Americans to know that of late years our exports have largely exceeded our imports, not alone in such staple articles as wheat and beef, but in almost every branch of industry. Ten years ago nearly all the perfumery and toilet articles used in this country were imported from Europe; to-day we not only manufacture for ourselves but are large exporters to South America, China, Japan and the Colonies. The immense growth of this particular industry on the Pacific Coast is simply astonishing. Slaven, who is now one of the largest cologne makers in the world, last year exported some 1,000,000 bottles of his famous Yosemite Cologne. For sale by Woodard, Clarke & Co., Portland, Oregon.

Jasper Stevens, Esq., returned last Saturday from an extended trip in eastern Oregon. Mr. George Smith also returned from the bunch grass country.

Mr Townsend has purchased the vacant lot between Mr McClaren's saloon and the hardware store and intend erecting a brick building. The price paid was $875.

A leap year party was given by our young ladies (from 16 to 20 years of age,) at Dunn's Hall on Thanksgiving night; about 40 couple were in attendance and a jolly good time was had.

The Eugene social dancing club has been reorganized, with Mr J. B. Underwood as president, Mr S. Wal[illegible] as secretary and H. C. [illegible] Humphrey as treasurer, and gave the first dance of the season on Thanksgiving day.

Mr. Frank Miller of [illegible] land and Miss Maggie Gray of this place are to be married Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock. We learn that the young couple will move to Portland [illegible] there permanently reside. We wish them a happy and prosperous life.

Messrs Renshaw & McCormack, our enterprising butchers, are buying a large number of hogs and are engaged in packing them down, and by next spring will have several thousand dollars worth of pork to sell. This is an enterprise much needed here, as heretofore our merchants have brought large quantities of bacon, hams and lard from California for home consumption.

Mr. Charles Baker has taken a lease of the St. Charles hotel of this place and will change its name to that of the Astor House. Mr Baker and his estimable wife have been engaged in the hotel business in Eugene for many years and have earned a good reputation as managers and caterers. We have now one hotel and three restaurants, owned respectively by Dr Crappan, Mr Johnson and Luf. Robinson, Esq.

On Friday night last at 5:30 Mr Chris Karger discovered a fire in the rear of Mr James McClaren's saloon, and with assistance, put it out before any damage was done. Upon examination it was found that a large pile of shingles and boards had been saturated with kerosene and set on fire, probably by some person or persons that intended mischief. Suspicion strongly rests on certain persons and their movements hereafter will be closely watched. We have just come out of one fire, and our citizens are not in a mood to treat incendiarism as a trifling matter, and we are assured that any person caught in the act of setting buildings on fire will receive harsh treatment such as would prevent their meddling again with fire—that is, in this world at least.

THURSDAY MORNING DEC 2 1880

REORGANIZATION OF PARTIES.

Mr William C Goudy member of the democratic national committee for Illinois has been giving his views on the existing political situation and the probable future of parties. In his opinion the time is approaching for a breaking up of the lines which separate the parties as now constituted. There is a strong independent element in both parties he said which is in accord upon many things and there seems to be a disposition on their part to come together. There are a great number of these independent thinkers who have taken the republican party as the lesser of two evils. They do not like that party but they cannot trust the democratic party. These men would hail with delight the creation of a new party under whose banners they might unite with out a fear that they would be betrayed or sold out. Mr Goudy now admits that the south has had too much influence in shaping the course of his party. Too much deference has been paid to it because of its solidity and the support it could give in national elections and national legislation. As a political force the solid south has been too strong—too strong for the good of the party and yet not strong enough to carry it to success. It is now time to abandon. Mr Goudy thinks that the old question of state rights was settled by the war and that it will probably not be revived again in a national contest. In his opinion fiscal and financial questions will ere long form the main line of division between the parties, and he thinks that there will be a redistribution of political forces on these questions. The republican party in control of the government will of course adhere to its present name but it is not unreasonable to suppose that the new party will adopt a new one. Mr Goudy is one of the most noted democratic politicians of Illinois and for many years has been member of the national democratic committee for his state, a position he still holds. When a man of his standing talks of the disintegration of his party as a probable and even a logically necessary event, it is a sign that a real ferment is in progress. But this party cannot change its nature by changing its name. It can be regenerated only by infusion of new elements and forces into it. This new material is expected from the republican party. But it is not likely to be obtained until time shall show a great change of behavior on the democratic side of the proposed alliance. Undoubtedly there are a great many who do not like the republican party as they do not like anything in this world; but it is hard to say whether anything short of miraculous change in the democratic party or the elements composing it could make them like that party better.

INDIANS AND THE ARMY

General George Crook is so well known to our people of Oregon and Washington that the more than ordinary interest is taken by them in his views and opinions on the Indian question and the relations of the military service to it. His annual report, just issued relates chiefly to the Ute war, or rather to the massacre which preceded it. He protests against the treaty which demands surrender of the Indians who murdered Agent Meeker and his employes, but makes no demand for surrender of those implicated in the assault on Major Thornburgh and his command. Yet the last named act was precisely as faithless and atrocious as the other. After repeated protests of friendship, these Indians took position in ambuscade and attacked the troops murderously. Under the circumstances it was a massacre, and nothing can justify the assumption that such behavior was an act of war. General Crook is one of the most considerate officers of the army in dealing with the Indians. Though never wanting in courage and spirit to fight them when necessary, he likewise possesses that other courage, backed by sense of justice which impels him to protest against all acts of perfidy and ill treatment towards them; and on many occasions he has given it as his experience that difficulties with them arise primarily—in a majority of cases—from the acts of the whites themselves, and that serious consequences could nearly always be averted by good judgment, justice and good faith. Much of the trouble arises from the fact that officials who deal with the Indians are allowed little or no discretion. They are bound by orders from Washington, which can not be modified to meet particular requirements, and, before adjustment can be had through slow and formal correspondence, it is too late. Savage impetuosity strikes the blow, and, government is committed to a troublesome expensive and perhaps sanguinary war.

General Crook makes certain statements and recommendations about the military service, in relation to duty in the Indian country which must strike any one as being warranted by the facts which he offers as their base. He is of the opinion that the soldiers of the regular army are the hardest-worked men in the world, and that they receive less for their labors, in money or credit than the soldiers of any other country. One of his suggestions is to the effect that where a colonel, for instance, does the work of a brigade commander, or where such an officer performs exceptionally excellent service, he shall be rewarded by the rank—that is to say by brevet—of a brigadier general. There seems no good reason why this should not be done, the more so that it does not include any increase in pay, and, hence, does not add to the expenses of the government in the support of the army. The request is a very simple one, involving no more than a mere recognition on paper of the exceptional services which may be rendered by an officer. It has also been stated by General Crook as well as the other officers, including the general of the armies, that there is altogether too much territory to be guarded too much work to be done considering the number of men there are to perform the service. There is no doubt about the truth of this assertion, nor, indeed of the stronger statement that "no force in the world has ever been called upon to do so much, in the ratio of its effective strength as has the little handful of men, upon the frontier, which we call the regular army."

THE WHIPPING POST

Mr Henry Bergh the humanitarian as a dispatch of to-day informs us comes to the front as an advocate of the whipping post. He would abolish the penitentiary and rely on the whipping post as a means of punishing or preventing certain classes of crimes. This is a suggestion which will revolt the minds of many. There is a feeling that it is a relic of less civilized ages or of barbarous times. This feeling however is probably not so strong now as it was some years ago. Crime has become so aggressive and has developed so many new and aggravating features that clergymen of great reputation jurists of fame, scientific men of eminence, magistrates of long and varied experience and the most intelligent people everywhere are fast adopting the conviction that something more than mere fines and short imprisonment is absolutely necessary to check crime in its incipiency. Fines and imprisonment too often affect only the innocent and suffering family of the offender and not the criminal himself. The logical consequence is that as they receive in their own proper persons no adequate punishment for their offenses they are always ready to repeat them when under the influence of passion or temptation. It is absurd to imagine that wife-beaters garroters and other villains of like kidney can be converted from the error of their ways except by employing against them the arguments they use against others. They are hopelessly beyond the reach of any appeal to their moral sensibilities for moral sensibilities they have none. The argument they can feel is the only one that can possibly con-time them. The brutal blackguard counts in the use of brute force as the most effective persuader and when the lash is laid upon him he confesses in that the only argument that can reach him.

THE STORY OF JUAN DE FUCA

A writer in the December Californian undertakes to prove that the voyage of Juan de Fuca, the navigator who gave his name to the strait, is a myth. The received account is that in the year 1592 de Fuca then in the service of Spain entered what is now known as the strait of Juan de Fuca. The writer in the Californian essays to dispose of de Fuca as an imaginary character. The claim of this alleged navigator rests on the narrative of Michael Lok who says that when he was at Venice in 1596 an old man then sixty years of age called Juan de Fuca a native of Greece and a mariner by profession arrived there having come from Spain. And he professes to have set down the story as the old Greek pilot related it. In brief the story is that he had been in the West Indies forty years and had sailed to and from many places in the service of the Spaniards. Afterwards he was employed by the viceroy of Mexico who sent him out upon the South sea (that is the Pacific) on a voyage of discovery to the supposed straits of Anian with a view to finding the passage by way into the North sea. That is the northwest passage was to be discovered or explored from this the western side of the continent. The story is that between 47 and 48 degrees of latitude he entered a broad inlet of the sea and sailing therein more than twenty days he found at length a much broader sea than was at the entrance of the strait. He went on land in many places and found it very fruitful and rich of gold silver pearls and other things. Being come unto the North sea and finding it to be thirty or forty leagues wide in the mouth of the straits where he entered he thought he had now finished the object of his voyage and so put about and arrived at Acapulco. This is presented as the only evidence on which the the alleged discovery rests. There is nothing in the records of Spain or Mexico to corroborate this account, and between 1584 and 1596 there is no record of any Spanish expedition being fitted out in Mexico for the North Pacific. According to Lock's narrative de Fuca had been received coldly in Spain and had come to Italy on his way to his old home. At Venice he related his story and made an appeal for English aid. Lock reports him as offering to go to England and lead an expedition for discovery of the northwest passage if the queen would pay him for goods which he said he had lost at the hands of Sir Thomas Candish, one of England's noted freebooters of that time. The story does, indeed wear an apocryphal look throughout. The appeal for English aid was motive enough for telling it. It is a very suspicious circumstance that no part of his story is confirmed by an official or historical record anywhere. The geography is glaringly incorrect and as the Spanish authorities never laid claim to such discovery it is declared impossible that such an expedition should have sailed from Mexico or under auspices of the Spanish authorities. Moreover "concurrent history negatives and the mercenary motive taints the whole story." This is the conclusion of the Californian writer who adds "Whether Lock fabricated the story, and what was his purpose or whether the so called Greek pilot imposed on him, will never be learned. To-day the only tenable view is that the strait of Juan de Fuca was first seen by white men in 1787 and that the party who saw it was the crew of the long boat of the Austrian East Indiaman Imperial Eagle commanded by Captain Berkly."

It is thought not improbable that Mr Garfield on taking the place now occupied by Mr Hayes will send Mr Hayes as minister to France. For several reasons this would be highly proper. Mr Hayes has given the country a clean and reputable administration a fact which contributed more to Mr Garfield's success than anything else. Again the high place held by Mr Hayes in public estimation, and the recognition he would receive as an ex-president of the United States would render his appointment upon a first class foreign mission a very worthy one. Gen Noyes of Ohio is now our minister to France. It is believed he will be recalled, as it is related that he joined in the condemnation of Garfield when the attempts to blacken the latter's character began some years ago, and that they have not since spoken to each other.

A rather good story comes from an Indiana town which is worth telling even if it is a tardy one. The democrats of the village shared the confidence of their distinguished statesman, William H English, and were absolutely sure of the perfect triumph of the democratic ticket. On the night of the election they placed a loaded cannon on the town square, and patiently awaited the news. It came—and the democrats slunk home, leaving the unfired cannon behind. Thereupon the enthusiastic republicans placed over the dumb mouth of this piece of ordnance a card bearing the well known words of the hymn

A charge to keep I have

That many persons voted for Garfield in the recent election who voted for Tilden four years ago, is a fact which the returns of nearly every northern state demonstrate. In no state is it more clearly seen than in Wisconsin. The aggregate vote of Wisconsin for president this year was 267,188. Four years ago it was 257,312. Increase in four years 9,876. Garfield's plurality is 29,554, Garfield's majority, 21,608. Hayes' plurality was 6,141; Hayes' majority, 2,957. Since a like result is presented in almost every northern state, it is utterly absurd in Tammany to pretend that it is due in New York to "fraud."

Yesterday the electoral college of Oregon met at Salem and cast the vote of the state for Garfield and Arthur. This time there was no pretended college set up as a sideshow to rival the college chosen by the people. C B Watson was chosen as messenger to carry the certificates to Washington. Our statement of yesterday that the law directing appointment of a messenger for this purpose had been repealed was an error. The certificates are to be placed in the hands of the president of the senate and are to be opened and counted in the presence of the two houses of congress on the second Wednesday of February.

Kansas has now got her prohibitory liquor law fixed so it will stick. At the recent election by a majority of 20,000 her citizens adopted an amendment to the constitution prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors within the borders of the state. But though the prohibitionists have secured a law that will stick there is no announcement that they have found a way to enforce it. There's the rub. The history of every liquor prohibitory law shows what an uphill business it is to coerce public opinion and private conduct by legislation in matters which do not constitute natural crime.

Most journals of the bunch grass country condemn the recommendation adopted recently at the council of surveyors general held at Salt Lake in relation to leasing to stock men the grazing lands of the country. Montana Idaho and eastern Washington papers have spoken against it.

THURSDAY MORNING, DEC. 2, 1880.

CITY.

Telegraph Line to Tillamook Rock.—It will be remembered that a few months ago Capt. Jackson, of the steamer Elder, addressed the board of trade fully on the subject of telegraphic communication between Tillamook Rock, Point Adams and ..., setting forth the features of such an enterprise, its great benefits to shipping and urging immediate action to secure governmental appropriation. If any steps have been taken to lay the matter before the proper authorities such action has not been made public. This is a propitious time for action on the matter. Col. Geo. L. Gillespie, engineer commanding this department, on his recent visit to Washington had a long conversation with Gen. Drum, chief signal officer, to whom he presented a forcible statement of the many needs of Oregon. Gen. Drum expressed great interest in this state and promised to use his efforts in securing such appropriations as were necessary. Congress will meet in a few days, and the matter should be brought before that body with the least possible delay. The first step to be taken is for the shipping merchants of Astoria and Portland, shipowners and others interested, to prepare a suitable memorial and present it to Col. Gillespie, who will forward the same to the department with his recommendations.

Proposed Improvement of D Street.—An ordinance is now before the common council, and will probably pass at the next meeting of that body, which provides for the improvement of D street, from Tenth to Eighteenth. Beyond Tenth street is a deep gulch which will have to be either filled or bridged over. Should the ordinance pass, the improvement of the street will be a very heavy tax on adjacent property owners. It is believed that a majority of the property owners along that portion of the street which it is proposed to improve, are ignorant of the purpose of the council. If a majority of the property owners are opposed to the improvement, they have the right, of course, to remonstrate. The time is very brief, and delay in the matter may cost those living on that thoroughfare a great deal of money. This paragraph is published for the purpose of informing the property owners most directly interested, of the intention of the city fathers.

Steamer Beached.—Tuesday, while the Oregonian Railway Company's steamer City of Salem was on her way up the Willamette, having on board a load of railroad iron, she met with a serious accident. The steamer passed safely through the locks and started away toward Rock Island. The wind was blowing fierce and the river very rough. In passing the island the wind and current caught the steamer as she was making a short turn, and carried her against a sunken rock. The blow was so heavy that a hole was knocked in the hull. The pumps were set quickly to work, and the steamer headed up the river. The water continued to gain and it soon became evident that the boat would sink unless beached. The steamer was run ashore at the place where she now lies. Repairs are being made and the boat will be ready to resume trips in a few days.

Lucky Young Fletcher.—J. W. Fletcher, the young fellow who stole a gold watch from Mr. M. ..., a member of the Melville English opera company, just escaped the penitentiary by a scratch. He was indicted for the larceny of a watch of the value of $40, the personal property of Michael Fos..., The jury found a verdict of guilty, but fixed the value of the watch at $30. This valuation of the watch brought the offense within the limits of a petty larceny and saved him from serving out a term in the state prison. Young Fletcher received his sentence yesterday afternoon—to pay a fine of $100 and in default of payment to be committed to the county jail for the period of 50 days.

Pardoned.—By a dispatch from Salem it is learned that President Hayes has pardoned the mail robber Smith. About five years ago, Smith was arrested on a charge of robbing the United States mails in Eastern Oregon. After committing the crime, he left this state and went to Texas. However, he was followed by J. B. Underwood, who was U. S. special agent for Oregon at that time, arrested, brought back and tried before Judge Deady. He was found guilty and sentenced to the penitentiary for eight years.

Bridge Located.—The Oregonian Railway Company, limited, have located their bridge across the Yamhill at Dayton, for their extension to Portland, and work will begin immediately upon its construction. In a few days 300 Chinamen will be put to work upon the grade and the work will be pushed forward with all haste. The work of constructing the road from Dayton to Portland is under the immediate supervision and control of Capt. R. S. Ed...

Entertainment.—The ladies' committee of the Temperance Society are making arrangements for an entertainment, chiefly musical, to be held at the ... Theater next Tuesday evening. In addition to the well known home talent, two ladies prominent in operatic circles are promised. Particulars will be given hereafter. The proceeds are for the purchase of a piano for the use of the society.

The New Light House.—The lens, oil and supplies for the new light house were landed on Tillamook rock last week, and a machinist went out yesterday from Astoria to adjust the lens. The trial illumination will be made about January 1st. It is probable that an official notice to mariners of the lighting of the light house will be published by ...

Snow Storm.—The Astoria boat reports having had a stormy trip on Tuesday while coming up. Snow had fallen at Skamokawa to the depth of an inch when the steamer passed that place. At Cathlamet a hail storm was prevailing, and in many places on either side of the river the hills were covered with snow and presented a wintry appearance.

Disgraceful.—A most disgraceful and disgusting sight was witnessed on First street yesterday afternoon. A woman was seen in front of Central ... staggering to and fro in a beastly state of intoxication. A large crowd collected to look at the pitiful sight, when Officer Luther swooped down and took the woman to the city jail.

On Trial.—Yesterday afternoon in the state circuit court the case of State of Oregon vs. John Hansen was called for trial. Hansen was jointly indicted by the grand jury with James Barry, H. Griffin and several others for making an assault with a dangerous weapon on ... Taylor. The several defendants have demanded separate trials.

A Clam Chowder.—Last evening a very cordial invitation was extended by the officers and members of Columbian Engine Co. No. 1, to Mayor Thompson and the city fathers, to attend a clam chowder which will be given at the engine room this evening. The invitation was accepted.

Blown from its Foundation.—The wind blew quite a gale in the country back of East Portland on Tuesday. A barn belonging to Mr. I. Sweet, about ... miles beyond East Portland, was blown from its foundation. So far as is known, there was no other damage to property.

To be Sentenced.—Judge Stott will pass sentence this morning on Peter Schmeer, who was found guilty by the jury of assault on the person of ... The defendant will be sentenced to be fined by the court—and in default committed to the county jail.

Jurors Discharged.—The petit jurors, who are in attendance on the state circuit court, will be discharged for the term on Saturday, December 11th. The grand jury has not been discharged yet, but will be when it completes judicial investigations in the course of a week.

Ordered to Report.—Pursuant to telegraphic instructions from the adjutant general, Capt. Lewis C. ..., assistant quartermaster department of the ..., will proceed to Washington, D. C., reporting upon his arrival to the quartermaster general of ...

Nothing pleases a married man more than the advent of a little stranger at his home, and if the stranger should be a boy, then the father is happy beyond measure. Early this week Mr. Herman Arnold became one of these happy mortals.

East Portland Prosperity.—East Portland is rapidly growing and never more prosperous than at present. It is said that there are only four vacant houses in the town. This, if true, certainly indicates a very high degree of prosperity.

Libel.—Mr. Walter Moss, publisher of the Sunday ..., and D. K. Henderson, who have been indicted for libel, will be arraigned in state court this morning to plead. The case has been set for trial to-morrow.

Burglary.—The residence of D. Marx, on Ninth street, was entered a few nights ago by burglars, during the absence of the family. The thieves carried off several articles of silverware. No clue to the burglars.

Shipping Wheat. — Yesterday afternoon the ... left here for Astoria having on board 215 tons of wheat. This grain will be transferred to the ship ..., which is lying at Astoria to complete her cargo.

Sold Out.—Messrs. J. W. Cook and V. Cook have sold their staunch little steam tug Ben Holladay to Messrs. Taylor & Nickum. The new owners will use the tug in towing their sand and stone barges.

Annual Meeting.—To-night at the Congregational church the prayer and conference meeting will be followed by the annual business meeting of the society. A full attendance is desired.

A BUSY SESSION

OF THE CITY COUNCIL LAST NIGHT.

New Ordinance for Leving and Collecting Taxes—W. H. Andrus Elected to Succeed Councilman Mackay.

Salary of the City Surveyor Increased to $2400—Usual Number of Bills, Ordinances, Etc.

The city council met in regular session last night, his honor, Mayor Thompson, in the chair; the city auditor and clerk and deputy, Chief of Police Lappeus and Councilmen Gerlach, Hewett, Keller, Kellogg, Nicklin, Raleigh, Stolte and Weber, present.

VETO MESSAGE.

The following message from the mayor was read and sustained by a unanimous vote:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, Nov. 24, 1880.

To the Honorable Common Council of the city of Portland: Gentlemen—I herewith return to you ordinance No. — entitled an ordinance adopting the report of the viewers in the matter of the proposed extension of South First street from Woods street to the south boundary of the city, and directing an entry of the assessments made in the docket of city liens, without my approval, for the following reasons:

In the report of the viewers which they have made to the common council, they have extended South First street from Woods street to the southern boundary of the city, a distance of 150 feet, and making it 90 feet wide while the remainder of the street is but 60 feet in width. The recommendation made by the viewers, proposing to vacate a portion of said street and sell the said vacated portion to pay the assessed damages, cannot be done, because on the vacation of any portion of a street, road or alley, the vacated portion becomes the property of the owner of the adjoining land, consequently the city does not become the owner of the vacated portion, but the damages in excess of the benefits must be paid out of the general fund—in this case amounting to $112 50. The only way this can be overcome is first to vacate the land on the west side of the street and let it attach to the block on the west side, and then allow the benefits accruing to pay the damages on the east side. There is one matter, however, that should be considered. There is already an extension of South First street, not in any way in controversy, of thirty feet in width, which, if improved, will give ample facilities for travel on that street, connecting, as it does, with a county road, which is only improved to the width of about twenty feet, and the bridge on which the proposed extension terminates is only twenty-four feet in width; besides, for some half a mile south of Woods street the land is laid off in blocks and lots, and must, in a very short time, become a part of the city of Portland, and if this extension is made now it must be continued indefinitely to the south boundary of additions to the city on the south.

It appears to me the proper way to make the extension of South First street would be to appropriate a small portion of block 108, and make the connection south as has been in the case of First and North First streets, and Second and North Second streets. This can be done, if deemed necessary, without expense to the city. Respectfully submitted.

THE LADIES' EMPORIUM.

A Visit to the Magnificent Establishment of John B. Garrison & Co.

Enterprising business men are not slow to take advantage of the rapid increase in wealth and population of Portland and the state at large, but meet the demand by careful and adequate supply. The truth of this assertion will not be doubted after an inspection of the establishment of

JOHN B. GARRISON & CO.,

No. 167 Third street, between Morrison and Yamhill. This enterprising firm, with a view to thoroughness and permanence, has leased the building 25x80 feet at the above location for a term of years and has spared neither expense nor labor in fitting it up for the purposes of their extensive business. At the left of the entrance is the

LADIES' EMPORIUM,

Under the direct care of Mrs. M. A. Winn r. Here we find an elegant variety of laces, guipure, tortion, Spanish Chantilly, Russian, Valenciennes English thread and other varieties, with their delicate tracery and elaborate design; imitation laces in large variety; a line of fine embroideries, one of the specialties of the establishment, edgings and insertions to match in various widths; embroidery silks, white and in all the new colors and tints; trimming satins in the latest shades; ruchings of various grades; coral, jet, steel and ivory ornaments, and an endless variety of articles found only in a first class house. Among the specialties we note what has never been brought to this city before—a dainty article of silk mull, handkerchiefs of the finest linen, plain and embroidered, and ladies' flannel underwear white and in colors, embroidered in silk. The show case in the center contains an elegant variety of the most rare laces artistically arranged over satin of various colors. A few feet from this is displayed an elegant white suit of Lonsdale cambric and tortion lace, made in the house.

On the right of the entrance is a full display of the

ROYAL ST. JOHN

And other sewing machines. This portion of the establishment is under the charge of John B. Garrison, and belonging to it is a large array of thread, needles, thimbles, machine oil and sewing machine fixtures. Passing on to the

MANUFACTURING DEPARTMENT

We find to the right of the hall a room elegantly fitted up for a ladies' reception room. Noticeable upon the wall of this room is a fine oil painting, "Sunset Hours," by Rosine; the apartment is provided with mirror, lounge, chairs, etc., stylish and appropriate. To the left of the hall is the quitting room, with appliances for that work, and beyond that is the sewing room, 12x30 feet, airy and well lighted for the business of the seamstress. This room is under the management of Miss Jennie Brown, lately of Edinburgh. A patent platting machine, with a capacity of 1000 yards per day, is one of the appliances of this room. This firm proposes to demonstrate the fact that ladies' underwear, plain or elaborately trimmed, can be made at home at prices as reasonable as those paid for the same articles imported so largely from the east, and at the same time furnish steady employment and reasonable wages to a large class of working women and girls. The principles upon which this establishment is founded are carefully considered and based upon the necessity for such an institution, and the elaborate care displayed in fitting it up, shows that it has come to stay. The members of the firm give courteous attention to the wants of their patrons, and will promptly and carefully fill orders from the country. An inspection of the goods offered is cordially invited.

What has been Done on the Snake, Clearwater, Willamette and Cowlitz Rivers.

The government snag boat has been doing excellent work since early fall in removing snags from Cowlitz river and cutting away overhanging trees.

The piling for the dike to close Coon island slough, at the mouth of the Willamette river is practically done. The facing of stone filling will be added this month, making the work complete.

Holmes and Chalmers are making satisfactory progress in their contract for improving the channel of Clearwater river at Big Eddy rapids, twenty-five miles above the mouth of that stream.

The contract of Capt. Geo. J. Ainsworth for improving Snake river at Texas rapids, has been completed to the satisfaction of the United States engineer commanding this department. Snake river will now be navigable during the entire year, from Grange City to Lewiston, except when closed by ice.

Col. G. L. Gillespie, major of engineers, has been requested to make an examination of Snake river from Lewiston south to the mouths of Imnaha and Salmon rivers, with a view of ascertaining its capabilities for furnishing an outlet for the Wallowa valley. It is probable that Col. Gillespie will order the desired examination made as soon as necessary funds are placed at his disposal.

The summer season of 1880 is the only one for five years past when dredging St. Helen's bar was not necessary, notwithstanding the Columbia river was lower in August and September than at any time since 1860. This result is directly attributable to the dam constructed last year at the head of Willamette slough, and has verified the predictions of U. S. engineers with regard to the work.

Great Men and Tidiness

[From the London Globe]

Only in domestic order can no accuracy be too rigid no solicitude too severe Dr Johnson a very slovenly fellow seems to have thought otherwise and ridiculed in one of his Ramblers under the character of Eriphile a spotless cleanliness in articles of furniture and a painful exactitude of position in their arrangement which he imagined inconsistent with comfort He appears to have looked upon tidiness as a sort of mental or moral disease, as a rigorous and spiteful superintendence of domestic trifles engendered in female minds by solitude or old age For him tidiness was a bitter and malignant love of propriety which rendered a home uninhabitable under pretense of keeping it neat and clean Perhaps however the great philosopher went too far in the opposite direction when he turned the candles upside down to make them burn brighter unconcernedly letting the wax fall upon Mrs Boswell s best carpet He may have wanted a better light to write some essay for the instruction of future generations of mankind compared to which the most gorgeous carpet could be but as dust in the balance His action was doubtless grand noble, independent still Mrs. Boswell was not satisfied She objected to it and the acute penetration of the man very soon afterward discovered that she wished him well to go "

What tidy housewife would have invited the great Napoleon a second time to her house if as recorded of him by his latest feminine biographer he ordinarily poked the fire with his boots? The progress of education has now softened the manners of men and made them less ferocious In what light would either of the above mentioned heroes have considered the cover of ornamental work for the back of a chair, or the cover of a sofa known as a ' tidy' from its supreme tidiness, with regard to which the present race of men has learned to grow unresisting and acquiescent? This is the article which again and again wriggles down into the seat behind one, and must be restored again and again to its primal position, or sat upon, and who among us not a lunatic or a bachelor is bold enough to accept the latter alternative? Well conducted men have been trained like the ' Happy Family" of the streets to put on the appearance of resignation They have been taught to look without any audible sign of emotion on that prim passion for the preservation of their chattels which covers as it were with a shroud both chair and sofa, the carpet beneath, and the chandelier above They are content to see no books on the table save those of unexceptionable propriety both inside and out They have been even known to derive satisfaction from the sight of a looking glass bound about with green or yellow tissue paper and festooned In a word their minds are filled with a due sense of the dignity and importance of tidiness

Love Stories.

[From the Blackwood s Magazine]

It was we think, with 'Jane Eyre that it began to be supposed that the hot encounter of two lovers, with all their juxtapositions and all their quarrels heats and coolness was the only object of fiction—a disastrous discovery which has done more damage in the world than many a more important mistake Taking Shakespeare s example however we may say that a story which is pure love and nothing else, must end in a catastrophe It is an intolerable state not to be supported by the great mass of human beings who are not in love, and its suddenness, and the overpowering brief current of its potency, the pity of the strange and tragic conclusion the bitter sweet of that union which is ending are component parts of its power over us and justify its acceptance as the supreme romance, the one typical tale of youth and passion There is no looking behind or after in that sudden rupture—it is all concentrated in the moment the hour, the one point of everlasting duration which to ordinary mortals is beat out upon the clock in the shortest spell of time But when the youthful pair occupy their real position in a real world the interest of their story not only gives zeal to the study of more ordinary existence, but it gives the indispensable composition, the necessary beginning and ending which every tale requires.

Society and Bernhardt.

[New York Special to the Enquirer

Just now the blue bloods of the Knickerbockers are seriously agitated as to whether or no to give the Bernhardt social recognition How to patronize an unmarried female with children is a conundrum which has not heretofore confronted the tony society of Gotham

On the gate leading to a house in the rural section of Philadelphia is the suggestive placard Nothing wanted but milk and the morning paper

FARM NOTES.

[From the American Agriculturist.]

WEEDS

The farmer should be deeply interested in the two leading points concerning weeds, how they get into fields and garden, and how to get those out that are already in Many of the seeds of weeds are sown with those of the crop, especially is this the case with those that are nearly of the size, color, etc , of the grains, and grass seeds. Great care should be exercised in sowing only pure seeds If the weeds are already in the soil, the quicker steps are taken to eradicate them the better Let no weeds go to seed This will end the annuals With perennials the work is more difficult but it should be remembered that they are much more easily destroyed when young Cut frequently and dig out by the roots when possible

ENGLISH AND AMERICAN IMPLEMENTS

The English manufacturer makes his implements heavy without much regard to the strength needed. Their forks, whether for spading, or hay, or manure forks, are much too heavy, and are most unwieldy as compared with the neatly shaped, lightly built, and easily handled American forks The English plow is usually three times as heavy as ours, twice as long, and much less easily handled. The cradles they use in cutting their grain would not be used by one of our reapers and so with many other of their heavy farm implements

HORSEBACK RIDING

Fifty or a hundred years ago the saddle was quite sure to be found in the farmer s barn as one of the necessary articles of the farm, but now it is too much put to one side for the harness and buggy When the roads are bad the saddle should be more generally used on the ground of both economy and comfort Boys and girls should learn the art of horseback riding As far as possible every farmer should have a horse suited to the saddle

SOME ITEMS IN FARM ECONOMY

The arrangement of the buildings and the division of the farm into fields depen is so much upon the character of the farm the kind of farming individual taste etc that it is out of the question to have a fixed plan that is the best one for all farms of any given size There are certain general principles which should serve as a foundation for the arrangement but the details must necessarily vary greatly For example, if possible the barns should be upon a rise of ground where a cellar can be built opening to the lower ground at the rear The fields should be so arranged that there shall be as little fencing as possible and so lo ated that all the fields can be easily reached from the lane A long field has considerable advantage over one of the same area that is square—in the long r bouts and therefore less time is spent in turning ploving harrowing, sowing, harvesting etc A pasture close to the stables is always handy and other things being equal the orchard should not be put at the rear of the farm, where the wood lot had best be located There is much labor to be saved in having every thing so placed—and this applies to the various details that seem trivial at first—that there will be no extra steps or turns in doing the everyday work of the farm For example many days work can be saved by having a pump in a handy corner of the barnyard where the stock from a number of yards may come to the troughs If the matters of the farm are not already economically arranged it would be well to make such changes of fences buildings etc as to finally secure the desired end By degrees the thoughtful farmer will improve his farm until it approximates to a model and therefore economical farm

CURED OF DRINKING

A young friend of mine was cured of an insatiable thirst for Liquor that had so prostrated his system that he was unable to do any business He was entirely cured by the use of Hop Bitters It allayed all that burning thirst took away the appetite for liquor, made his nerves steady and he has remained a sober and steady man for more than two years and has no desire to return to his cups and I know of a number of others that have been cured of drinking by it —From a leading R R Official Chicago Ills

SHORTHORNS AND HEREFORDS

The Mark Lane Express of August 23 makes a c[illegible] Shorthorn [illegible] Hereford [illegible] American [illegible] [illegible]

These w[illegible] in this count[illegible] All [illegible] that the Hereford [illegible] shorthorns We th[illegible] certainly [illegible] of the [illegible] will be l[illegible] If the [illegible] Mark Lane Express are to be taken as correct [illegible] the Hereford [illegible] relative value so far as the [illegible] concerned [illegible] that the shorther is not equal to the Hereford as a grazer and that the former will not make as good or better weigh on the same grass and further that the same weight of grass in a shorthorn will not sell for as much money to the feeder as the Hereford will [illegible] will not bring as much money as the latter [illegible] the butcher cannot [illegible] carcass [illegible] so much profit [illegible] will do well to make a note of it [illegible] as certain as death that the most profitable cattle will eventually take the lead and usurp the great pastoral regions of the West as well as rapidly come into favor with farmers everywhere We presume however the shorthorn breeders will take issue at once with our English contemporary and vehemently claim as they have always done that shorthorns are in all respects equal and superior to any other breed of cattle Would it not be well to inaugurate tests looking to the settlement of these important questions?—Prairie Farmer

THE DEMAND FOR JERSEY CATTLE

Mr Thomas Fitch of New London Connecticut one of the leading Jersey cattle-breeders of the country says that the demand for Jersey cattle was never so great or their value so much appreciated since he has been engaged in breeding them which has been for more than thirty years There is a growing demand also for these grades not from the larger cities of New England where those who buy milk, and have once learned the difference in quality between that and common stock insist on the milkmen giving them the best It is gratifying to learn that importations from the island are on the increase and that new herds of thoroughbreds are being established everywhere throughout the country

SHEEP IN WINTER

(National Live Stock Journal)

Two extremes should be avoided in the matter of shelters One may be insufficient while the other may be so close as to be unhealthy The majority of mistakes are with those who shelter insufficiently In such instances more food is consumed than would otherwise be required and no corresponding benefits accrue The shelters on the sheep farm should be made to increase in size as rapidly as the flock multiplies its numbers

The water supply should be carefully looked to A flock of a given number will drink more water in winter than will be needed when on pasture If such an arrangement can be economically secured access to water twice a day is better than but once This for two reasons —first the more timid animals which are likely to be held back in the morning by their stronger fellows have a chance when the latter are not so eager and secondly all danger from over-drinking of cold water is obviated Use of snow in lieu of water should be forced upon the flock only under the extremes necessity Stock will live under such circumstances but unsatisfactory thrift will not be secured

Ewes in lamb should as far as practicable be fed and sheltered separately from the non breeding animals as the crowding and more rapid movements of the latter are apt to result injuriously while such separation makes more convenient certain little attentions which breeding ewes are entitled to as the weaning season approaches and which may be profitably accorded to them

Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint,

DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure sometimes the pain is in the left side, the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, the bowels in general are costive sometimes alternative with lax the head is troubled with pain accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done A slight dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility, he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin, his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

DR C. McLANE's LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL

For all bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated

Every box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression DR McLANE's LIVER PILLS

The genuine McLANE s LIVER PILLS bear the signatures of C McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrappers.

Insist upon having the genuine DR C. McLANE's LIVER PILLS prepared by Fleming Bros , of Pittsburgh Pa , the market being full of imitations of the name McLane, spelled differently but same pronunciation
